KINGSLEY, CHARLES. Adm. pens. at TRINITY, Jan. 22, 1838. S. of Charles (above). B. June 12, 1819, at Holne, Devon. Schools, Clifton, Helston, and Grammar School, Cornwall, and King's College, London. Migrated to Magdalene; matric. Easter, 1838; Scholar; prizeman; B.A. (Class. Trip, 1st Class) 1842; M.A. 1850. His family claimed descent from the Kingsleys of Vale Royal, in Delamere Forest. 'A precocious child, writing sermons and poems at the age of four; he early developed his love of natural history and sport. His physical strength was great; he walked one day from Cambridge to London, "with ease. I have walked ten miles," he said, "down the Cam to-day and up England, and to go on to the Fen wud." and "over mountains" is an idiom in a roading Fen stuid.' While preparing for ordination 'the conflict between faith and unbelief, between his hopes and his fears, was so fierce and bitter, that when he returned to Cambridge in 1839, he became reckless, and nearly gave up all for lost. He read but little, went for excitement of every kind... anything to deaden the remembrance of the happy past, which just then promised no future... More than once he nearly resolved to leave England, and to go on to the Far West to live as a wild prairie hunter. Adm. at Lincoln's Inn, Apr. 3, 1839. Ord. deacon (Winchester) July, 1842; priest, 1844; C. of Eversley, Hants., 1842-4; R. there 1844-75. Domestic Chaplain to Viscount Sydney, 1843-75. Professor of English Literature in Queen's College, Harley Street, 1843-9. Resided at Bideford, 1854-5, owing to his wife's (Frances E. Grenfell) bad health. Regius Professor of Modern History at Cambridge, 1860-9, during which period he continued to live at Eversley, going to Cambridge twice a year to deliver his lectures. Under him a special class was formed in 1861 for the benefit of the Prince of Wales, who was then in residence at Madingley Hall. A controversy with John Henry Newman, in 1864, produced Newman's famous Apol. 1864, in reply to Kingsley's pamphlet, 'But what is Dr Newman?' Canon of Chester, 1866-75. Canon of Westminster, 1873. Chaplain to the Queen, 1859-75. Married, 1844, Frances E., dau. of Pascoe Grenfell. Author, A Life of St Elizabeth of Hungary, 1848; Yeast (which appeared in Fraser's Magazine, 1848); Alloy, Low, etc. (described by Carlyle as 'a fervid creature, still left half chaotic'); Hypatia, 1853; Il estward Hol, 1854; Glaucus, 1855; The Heroes, 1856; Two Years Ago, 1857; The Water Babies, 1865; Hercule and the Wake, 1866; At Last, 1870, after a voyage to the West Indies; Poems. Among other of his works were, The Roman and the Teuton, 1864, based on his Cambridge lectures; Town Geology, 1875; Prose Idylls, 1873; Health and Education, 1874; Brave Words to Brave Soldiers, a tract to the Christian War. Three hundred copies with annotations into various schemes for the improvement of the working-classes, and, as 'Parson Lot', published an immense number of articles on current topics, especially in the Christian Socialist and Politics for the People. Of a highly nervous temperament, he suffered from a stammer, but was a very eloquent preacher. In 1874 went for a holiday to America, and, while there, had an attack of pleurisy; another followed on his return to England, and he died at Eversley, Jan. 23, 1875, buried there. On his tombstone are the words 'Amatissimus, Amatus, Amabissimus.' His bust, by Woolner, stands in the Poets' corner, Westminster Abbey. Father of Maurice (1866). Edited Beza, and published a Latin preface so full of bad Latin that he deemed it expedient to call in those copies that had been circulated in the University. In 1793 became prominent as proposer in connection with the proceedings against William Froude (Jesus College), who had been deprived of his Fellowship and tutorage because of his openly professed Unitarian or Socinian views; in this capacity he seems to have displayed more zeal than discretion, and rendered himself very obnoxious; in return his letters and slips in Latin were ridiculed, and his writings were sharply criticised by Porson in the British Critic, etc.; he was also fiercely attacked by Thomas Edwards (1776), Fellow of Jesus. Died Jan. 28, 1822, at Rotherham. Cont. Ad. Bib.; Southey's Newbaths; Cont. N.B.; Cont. Ad. Bib.; Gunning, i. chap. 9 and ii. 40-53; St John's Coll. Adm., iii. 69-8.

LIVEING, GEORGE DOWNING. Adm. pens. at St JOHN'S, Oct. 27, 1845. [Eldest s. of Edward, surgeon, of Nayland, Suffolk (and Catherine Mary). B. there [Dec. 21, 1827]. Bapt. Jan. 25, 28, 1828. Matric. Michs. 1846; (11th Wrangler); 1850; Nat. Sci. Trip., 1st Class, 1851; B.A. 1850; M.A. 1853; 1855. Ord. deacon, 1850. Fellow, 1853-60, 1860-1862, 1863-1911-24. Professor of Chemistry at the Staff and Royal Military Colleges, Sandhurst, 1860. Started the first course of practical chemistry for medical students, in a primitive laboratory, fitted up in a cottage in Corn Exchange Street, 1862. Professor of Chemistry, 1861-1908. In 1863 the College founded for him a Chemical Lectureship in Chemistry and built for his use a College Laboratory behind the New Court. This assisted him in the important part he was playing in the expansion of University work, as one of the founders of modern scientific studies and the first teacher of experimental science in the University. F.R.S., 1879; Davy Medal, 1901. J.P. for Cambridge and Cambs. Married, Aug. 14, 1860, Catherine, 2nd dau. of the Rev. Rowland Ingram (Pembroke, 1821), K. of Little Liding, Norfolk. Author, many articles on spectroscopy, crystallisation, etc. The University Chemical Laboratory, finished in 1888, and then one of the finest in the Kingdom, owed much to his patient and skilful planning. As the Cambridge correspondent of two successive Chancellors, Dukes of Devonshire, he discharged a task of considerable responsibility with strict impartiality and great industry, and with characteristic scrupulousness destroyed all the records of his tenure as deacon. His disinterestedness, unflinching rectitude and distinguished presence made him one of the most respected figures in the University, and in his old age his tall bent figure as he made his daily journeys between his home and College was one of the most familiar in the town. On the 75th anniversary of his matriculation, in the Combination Room of St John's, the Vice-Chancellor presented him with an address from the University (printed in the Eagle, Jan. 1922)—an occasion probably unique in the University's annals. He had a remarkable memory, talked freely of the men and events of the past, but would write no reminiscences; "I never look back," he said, "I look always forward." Resided first at the Pightle, Newnham, and latterly in Mad's Causeway. Died Dec. 26, 1924, aged 97, as the result of being knocked down by a cyclist while walking to his laboratory. Brother of the above and of Robert (1857). (D.N.B.; Who was Who, 1919-28; E. A. Bennans.)

LLOYD, CHARLES. Adm. Fell.-Com. (age 23) at CAIUS, Aug. 31, 1798. [Eldest s. of Charles (for whom see D.N.B.), banker, of Birmingham. B. there (Feb. 12, 1775). School, private, under Mr Gilpin. Matric. Michs. 1795. Curiously famous for his friendship with Coleridge, De Quincey, and Charles Lamb. His first volume of Poems was published in 1795. Made the acquaintance of Coleridge, 1796, and was so fascinated by him that he arranged to make his home with him, paying him £80 a year, in return for which Coleridge was to give him instruction for three hours every morning. They lived first at Kingsdown, Bristol and later Lloyd accompanied the Coleridges to Nether Stowey. Here he seems to have suffered from 'fits,' and Coleridge described his condition as 'alarms.' Subsequently went to London and formed a friendship with Charles Lamb, who appears to have found him irritating company. 'I had well-nigh quarrelled with Charles Lloyd; and for no other reason than that the good creature did all he could to make me happy.' In 1797, Lloyd and his wife published a collection of Poems. As an appendix to a second edition of Coleridge's works, Coleridge shortly afterwards ridiculed their poems in a series of sonnets in the Monthly Magazine, declaring that he had only allowed Lloyd's work to be included with his own at the earnest desire of the writer. This caused a breach between Coleridge and Lloyd and Lamb, which lasted for several years. Blank Verse by Charles Lloyd and Charles Lamb appeared in 1798. Lloyd married, Apr. 24, 1799, Sophia, dau. of Samuel Pemberton, of Birmingham, and had issue. According to De Quincey, he eloped with her by proxy, employing Southey to carry her off. They resided first at Barwell, Cambridgeshire (described in one of Lloyd's best poems) and, after 1800, at Low Brathay, Ambleside. Made the acquaintance of De Quincey, 1807. First began to suffer from mental illness about 1811; placed in an asylum near York, but escaped from it, 1815, and made his way back to Westmorland, where he suddenly appeared at De Quincey's cottage. De Quincey vividly described his pathetic condition. Partially recovered, 1816, and published more Poems and dramatic works. Eventually went to France, and died in a maison de santé near Versailles, Jan. 16, 1836. 'His poetry... is mainly subjective and monotonous from the writer's continual self-absorption... De Quincey compares him to Rousseau.' His best poem is probably De Quincey's Thoughts in London, 1821, which contains a beautiful description of LOFFT, CAPELL. Adm. pens. (age 18) at FETTERBROOK, Apr. 20, 1759. Only s. of Christopher (Private Secretary to Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough) (and Anne Capell, sister of Edward Capell (1730) of Troston, Suffolk, the Shakespearean scholar). B. Nov. 14, 1751, in London. School, Eton. Adm. at Lincoln's Inn, Nov. 2, 1770. Called to the Bar, of Troston and Stanton, near Bury St Edmunds, from his uncle, Robert Capell, 1781. A strong Whig, he took part in the agitation against the slave trade and also the war with America. Brevell, in his Life of Johnson, describes him as 'This little David of popular spirit.' His name was struck off the roll of magistrates in 1800, because of his 'unproper interference' 'in trying to save the life of a poor girl condemned to death by the law.' He corresponded with most of the literary figures of his time; a staunch supporter of Napoleon, who is reported to have said that he 'counted him among his closest friends.' Married (1) Aug.

20, 1778, Anne, dau. of Henry Emlin, of Windsor. (2) Mar. 10, 1780, Sarah Watson, dau. of John Fisher, of Bury, of Cambridge, authoress of many Sonnets. Settled at Turn, 1822.
